 Cannabis Capsules - A step-by-step guide.

Part 1 - Acknowledgements and thanks.

I'd like to begin with a big thank you to weedhound and sickpup45 who inspired me to experiment with Cannabis Capsules in the first place, and to Opie Yutts who 'nudged' me into writing this 'step-by-step' tutorial for the forums. Cheers guys!

Secondly, I've tried to keep this guide as simple as possible, but, as the box says 'Some assembly is required', and therefore, this guide might not be suitable for everyone. It needs some ingredients to be measured (with a teaspoon), and the purchase of a few essential (and some optional) items.

Where possible, I'll include detailed descriptions of everything you might need, where to get it from and roughly how much it might cost etc.

To give you an idea of the unit cost (excluding the price of the weed), if you made 1000 capsules (enough for 1 person to remain high for a year!) the cost would be around $51 or £25 for the ingredients (oil/butter and capsules). That's less than $0.05 cents or £0.03 pence each!

Including the cost of the weed (based on an average price of $15 or £7.50 a gram), you're looking at around $1.30 or £0.65 per capsule (for caps made from hash or kief) or $1.90 or £0.95 pence (for caps made from prime bud).

Still reading? OK, here goes:

Here's what we'll be making.

The following 'step-by-step' tutorial outlines the tools and techniques needed to convert quantities of bud, hash or keif into tasteless pill capsules that can be swallowed to give a measured dose of potent, active THC to the user.

For simplicity and economy we'll just be using 1 gram of hash or kief (or, one and a half grams of bud) and making it into 12 cannabis capsules, each containing around 0.08 grams of activated THC.

As a guide:

- 1 capsule can be taken by medicinal users for strong pain relief.
- 2 capsules will give a regular smoker an intense 4 to 6 hour trip.
- 3 capsules (experienced tokers only) a 6 to 8 hour plus 'wild ride'.

To make larger quantities of capsules simply increase the ingredients pro-rata.
i.e. To make 24 pills just double everything, for 48 double everything again and so on.

Part 2 - What you'll need (some essential and some optional items).

The essential cookery 'Equipment':

1. A Slow Cooker (see the first picture). Also known as a 'Crock Pot' in the States.

Or:

A medium sized pan, a mixing bowl and a lid (see the second picture), and some hot water.

2. A quantity of size 00 Gelatine Capsules. They can be bought from some pharmacies, health food shops or online in quantities of 100+ (see third picture).

3. A teaspoon (hopefully everyone will have one of these).

The essential cookery 'Ingredients':

Either: 1 gram of good Hashish (not soap bar).

Or: 1 gram of fine grained 'keif'.

Or: 1.5 grams of good 'Bud' (no stems, no seeds, or pointy leaves).

And: 7 grams (one and a half teaspoons) of Coconut oil or clarified butter*.

The optional cookery items:

A capsule holder to help when filling (see part 3).

A syringe or pipette to fill the caps with a measured dose of oil (see part 3).

A set of accurate measuring spoons (see part 3).

OK, assuming you've got access to a 'crock pot' (or a least a pan and a mixing bowl), and a little 'weed', what else is required?

The other main essential items are the capsules to put your activated mixture in, and (possibly) a few other extras to help in the measuring and filling process, and that's it.

Part 3 - Where to buy what you need, and for how much:

The essential items:

Empty pill capsules come in several sizes, the ones I recommend are 00 sized, as the smaller ones are a little fiddly to make and don't hold much, and the bigger sizes are a little hard to swallow.

Also, select only the Gelatine variety not the vegetarian ones as they can leak when exposed to fats and oils.

An internet search for 'empty 00 gelatine capsules' will no doubt give you a variety of sources. Expect to pay 'roughly' $3.00/£1.50 per 100.

Ideally, you'll also need a jar (or tub) of Coconut oil, or failing that some clarified butter (or 'Ghee' as it's called in Asian cookery). If you're struggling to find either, don't panic, it's easy to make your own Ghee using ordinary butter (I'll explain further on).

Coconut oil (solid depending on room temperature) can be bought from some health food shops and other specialist food stores.

Go for the 'extra virgin organic coconut oil' if you can find it, as It's one of the safest oils to cook with, contains no 'trans fats' (unhealthy fat), is high in saturated fat, and most importantly is 'digestion friendly' (unlike certain other monounsaturated or polyunsaturated oils) meaning the THC can be absorbed easily by the stomach and liver, and therefore passed into the bloodstream to do its job without loss of potency. Expect to pay between $7/£3.50 for a 200 gram jar. Enough for around 336 capsules, plus it'll keep for years in the fridge.

The optional items:

In addition, there are some items that'll help in making the capsules easier to measure and fill, but you can get by without them as long as you have a steady hand and some patience. However, for those people who are likely to repeat the process, they are inexpensive to buy and make it much easier and quicker to make regular or larger quantities.

They are:

A) A capsule filler container. The one shown in the picture is a 'Cap.M.Quik' model which holds 50 capsules. Expect to pay around $20/£10 for one.

N.B. Make sure it is sized for 00 capsules.

Typically, if you buy one from ebay you'll be offered it with the capsules bundled together (usually 400/500) for around $40/£20.

B) A syringe or pipette. To siphon off the activated oil and 'inject' into the capsules (the one pictured is a children's liquid medicine dispenser and holds exactly 1 teaspoon (5 ml)).

For sale in most pharmacies for around $2/£1.

C) An accurate set of measuring spoons (a 'nice' to have). The ones pictured can be used to scrape exactly the right amount of 'solidified' Coconut oil or clarified butter out of the jar or tub (assuming it's straight out of the fridge). Once you've levelled off the spoon, you'll have the precise amount, 5 ml (Useful for dosage control). These can be bought from most household or cookery stores for around $5/£2.50.

Part 4 - The science bit.

The key to making effective capsules is in the THC extraction process.

In short, the secret is to expose the bud, keif or hash to prolonged, low heat (simmering) in an oil or butter high in saturated fat* in order to thoroughly break down the structure of the resin heads and allow the THC to 'bind' to the fat molecules.

If the temperature is too high, you run the risk of losing potency due to the vaporisation/evaporation of the THC (if the smell is strong, you're doing it wrong). Too low, and you won't convert the inactive compounds into active, or allow them an opportunity to effectively combine with the oil/butter.

This fat is then added to the capsules, which once swallowed, release the concentrated THC directly into the stomach for maximum absorption into the bloodstream.

*The type of 'short chain fatty acids' that are found in Coconut oil and Ghee (clarified butter) are excellent conductors of THC, and much easier for the human digestive system to metabolise. Therefore, where possible, go for an oil or butter high in saturated fats rather than monounsaturated or polyunsaturated. Although they'll still work, much of the potency will be lost, requiring much greater amounts of weed to eat in order to achieve similar results. As coconut oil is far cheaper than good weed, you're better off investing in a jar.

N.B. 1 gram of weed in a firecracker is good for only one hit, 1 gram in this capsule form is good for about 12.

For a more detailed explanation of how to make Canna-butter and the science and techniques involved, check out my other Cannabis cooking thread:

Cannabis cooking made easy – A tutorial and guide.

To make the capsules we'll be following the exact same procedures, but using smaller amounts of oil/butter. (If you haven't time to read it, don't worry, as everything you need to know is contained within this guide).

Part 5 - Now the 'how to' bit:

I usually recommend using 'hashish' or 'keif' over 'Bud' when cooking, because it is a quicker and simpler process of conversion, and the effects are (slightly) more predictable. However, if you only have access to 'Grass' don't worry, you can still make them just as easily using the following method.

Grass method:

Due to the difference in THC strength, you'll need to use 1.5 grams of good quality well cured bud in order to match the potency of 1 gram of hash or keif. Firstly, remove any stems, seeds or obvious leaf material then grind to as small a grain (powder) as you can manage, then just follow the rest of the steps as detailed below.*

The Canna-oil Method: If using a Slow Cooker (Crock pot).

The beauty of slow cookers is you can pretty much switch them on and forget about them.

Typically, a slow cooker will have 2 or 3 settings (low, medium and high).

Due to the size of these 'cookers' I recommend placing your oil/butter in a much smaller 'oven-proof' container otherwise it'll just make a thin coating on the bottom of your pan.

In my case I use an eggcup (or a coffee cup when making larger quantities) the shape makes it easier to 'siphon' off the oil and to scrape out the residue.

Simply set the cooker to 'low' (around 80/90 degrees centigrade), add the ghee/oil and then the hash/keif or bud and leave to slowly simmer for the required time.

1 hour for hash.

1 and half hours for keif.

2 hours for bud.

The Canna-oil Method: If using a Pan and Mixing Bowl

Pour around three inches of boiling water into your cooking pan, then sit the mixing bowl in the water so that it's floating just off the bottom (very important – see picture), add the oil or Ghee (clarified butter) to the mixing bowl and let it melt, then add your hashish, kief or powdered bud and dissolve slowly while keeping the lid on and the boiling water just barely simmering beneath.

N.B. Floating the mixing bowl in the water and keeping the lid on prevents 'burning off' the THC which evaporates/vaporises at high temperatures (around 140 centigrade plus). The boiling water keeps the butter/oil at the perfect temperature of around 100 degrees centigrade (boiling point) to slowly 'wring' out every last molecule of 'spacey goodness'!.

Part 6 – Filling the capsules:

Now that you've made your concentrated THC saturated oil/butter you need to get it into your capsules.

Firstly, wait for the oil to cool down a little otherwise you run the risk of melting the capsules.

Both the coconut oil and Ghee will remain liquid around the 24 degrees centigrade mark for quite a while, therefore it's easier to add the oil while it's still in this form assuming you have something to draw up the liquid like a children's medicinal syringe, pipette or similar. Just add it in equal measures to the capsules.

Once you've added even amounts of the oil to your caps you'll need to scrape out and add the residue. I've found that the handle of a teaspoon or coffee stirrer is ideal for this process, however if you want to take it to another level you can always purchase a laboratory spatula or spoon like the ones in the picture.

N.B. Depending on whether you used hash/kief or ground bud will dictate how easy this process is. For example hash and kief will be mostly oil with a small residue at the bottom, while ground bud will be more like a paste, and as such hard to draw up in a syringe. In this case (or if you don't have a syringe), you may want to pour the oil/butter onto a small plate and then put it in the fridge until it sets. Later, using the tip of a sharp knife, cut the butter into twelve equally sized pieces and poke them into the capsules using a chopstick/match etc.

Part 7 - Master class techniques and tips.

If using bud, remember 'no stems, no seeds or pointed leaves'.

Anyone who's grown and studied their plant under a x30 jeweller's loupe will be able to describe the microscopic thorns that the pointed leaves are covered in. Even when finely ground, some of these thorns can survive and irritate the stomach lining.

Also (contrary to most advice given about eating cannabis), I don't recommend you take cannabis capsules on a completely empty stomach. Remember, normally when you eat a firecracker or space cake your eating weed that is bound to (and diluted in) some form of food. Therefore by eating something like: a slice of toast, a sandwich or a packet of crisps beforehand, you're preparing your stomach to digest food and thereby activating the gastric juices which will break down your capsules quickly and efficiently.

Any other questions, please feel free to fire back.

Part 8 - Key Recipe Features:

- The ultimate stealth 'medication'.
- Highly concentrated form of THC
- Requires only very small amounts of bud.
- Great for stealth cooking as the low heat creates virtually no smell.
- Extremely potent due to the type of saturated fats used.
- Simpler to make and keep than a firecracker.
- Incredibly cheap
- They'll blow your tits off – Guaranteed!

N.B: Effects will start to 'kick in' after about an hour and a half, and last for around six to eight hours (depending on how many you took). Should you begin to feel overwhelmed you can shorten the 'trip' and reduce its effects by eating sugary foods, or drinking fruit juices rich in vitamin C.

For those people who give it a try, I'd love to hear how you get on.
Hopefully, you can keep this thread alive by posting up your experiences so everyone will get a chance to see them.
Oh yes, and it took me a while to write all this up, so a sticky or any rep donations gratefully accepted lol.

Cheers and enjoy Flame.

Cheers guys!!! 🌱

I just realised I forgot to mention the obvious:

Coconut oil is actually quite good for you, and 'no smoke' means they're a healthier option!

By the way, one of my friends who regularly tokes and makes firecrackers, tried just one of these capsules recently, thinking he would be 'tolerant' to the effects.

While watching TV in my cinema room, he became so high he had to lie on the floor with his eyes shut because he was convinced he was being 'sucked' into the picture! lol

So take it easy at first if give them a try.

Hi weedhound

Lol, just testing to see if you were paying attention. You passed!
Have some 'Brownie points'!

N.B. Brownie points were withdrawn as legal tender in 1997, but can be used in exchange for a variety of sexual or domestic favours.
i.e. I would like you to. . . (insert kink here), or, get me: a cup of coffee, a bottle of beer etc, etc. lol did you order those capsules off the internet? I can't find them at any pharmacies or grocery stores or organic stores... bummer can you keep it just in a bottle and take certain amounts or something and how long does it keep?

if a machine was created to make this process simple then I MIGHT (stretching it) buy it.. sure its better for you, but id rather just pack the bowl.

on the other hand, you are obviously very interested in this method.. your guide is simply amazing. you did it very, very thouroughly. Props keep smoking.. or in your case keep poppin?

This is a really cool idea....I can't wait until I get the opportunity to try this myself. I'm definitely going to stop smoking for my health if these things knock me on my ass.

Then I rose...wipin' the blunt's ash off my clothes
Then froze...only to blow the herb smoke through my nose...

touche. these capsules might be worth trying after all. i still give you props for it though. ☺☺ however, i have eaten some good weed before, on 1 occassion I can specifically remember.. as it was one of the highest times i've been. you are right it def. does make it more of a LONGER stoned sensation. but i kind of like the idea of smoking it for some reason, as i like the various methods of smoking it as opposed to baking it or capsuling it. everyone has their preferences, yours is very unique.

Thanks for the two wonderful guides, I can't wait to try both of them after I actually find a good hash connect.

I have a clarification about making your own clarified butter, though. I assume the clear golden oil is the stuff you keep and refrigerate, so do you also use 15g of the liquid? Would a good way of measuring out 15g of this liquid be to place a cigarette cellophane on your digital scale, set it to 0, and then slowly pour the liquid until it reaches 15 grams?

Hey man these are a great idea. I have a question though. How do you think cops would handle these? I mean, lets just say you had a lot in your car and shit...how do you think they would go about weighing it/testing them to see how to "punish" you? Hopefully you see what I'm saying regarding these capsules potential 😊. Just wondering how you think the "authorities" would handle these...thanks and great work.
